

I would like to make a brief statement about cell phone use on aircraft. As a flight attendant I feel that the use of cell phone during flight would be a big mistake. Air travel already infringes on personal space with the small nature of aircraft. To be bombarded with loud calls and constant phone ringing with no place to walk away for peace and quite is a confrontation waiting to happen. People's stress levels are already almost to the breaking point as they board an aircraft, to add a major annoyance such a cell phone calls would have to potential to throw people over the edge.
